

Mark Gasparotto

Leadership Development Professional & Keynote Speaker

Short Bio

Colonel (Retired) Mark Gasparotto is a leadership development professional, entrepreneur, author, speaker, and decorated combat veteran, who helps people and teams to Struggle Well and Clear the Way — linking leadership-of-self to individual productivity, team performance, and organizational profitability.

Long Bio

A decorated combat leader, successful entrepreneur, and author, Colonel (Retired) Mark Gasparotto fuzes his varied operational and business background with a Masters in Leadership to bring to life the art and science of leadership. His rugged intellectualism allows him to translate his intense experiences into practical and actionable leadership participant take-aways.

A member of the TEC Canada (Vistage) community, Mark was awarded the TEC Impact Speaker Award for 2020. He is the co-author of Clearing the Way: Combat Engineers in Kandahar — now an award-winning documentary film.

Mark credits much of his battlefield and business results to the intentional work on his Inner Game. He believes that he has a duty to share his hard-won experiences in the service of building stronger communities.

He has been interviewed by CBC News, National Post, Ottawa Sun, and Canadian Military Family Magazine.

Employing those same battle-tested techniques, Mark helps people and teams to Struggle Well and Clear the Way — linking leadership-of-self to individual productivity, team performance, and organizational profitability.
